FLOOR PLAN OF THE WEEK | the revival

The Revival by Aspen Homes is priced at $1.985 million, reflecting a recent $610,000 price reduction. This 5,999-square-foot, five-bedroom, six-bathroom home is perched on a hill in Issaquah Highlands' exclusive Harrison Street neighborhood. A spacious covered porch spans the full length of the home, across the back deck to views including the Seattle skyline and Olympic Mountains.

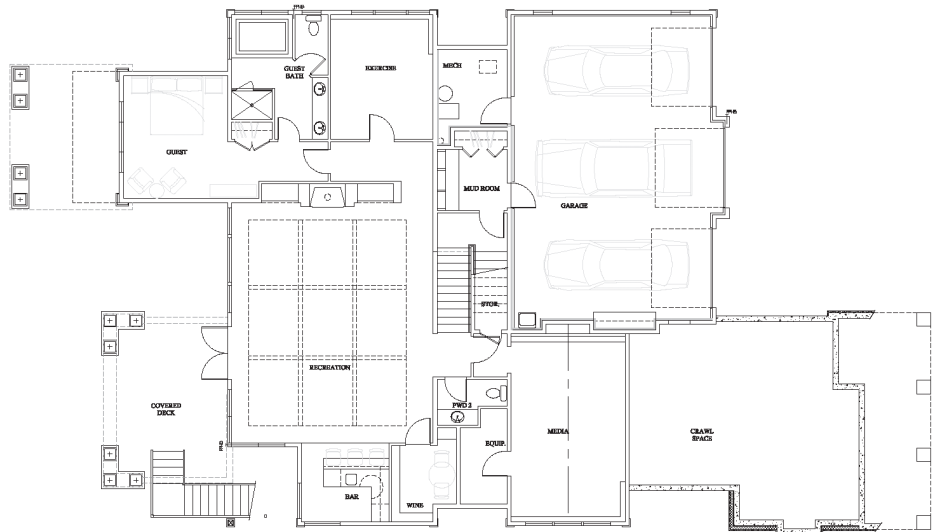

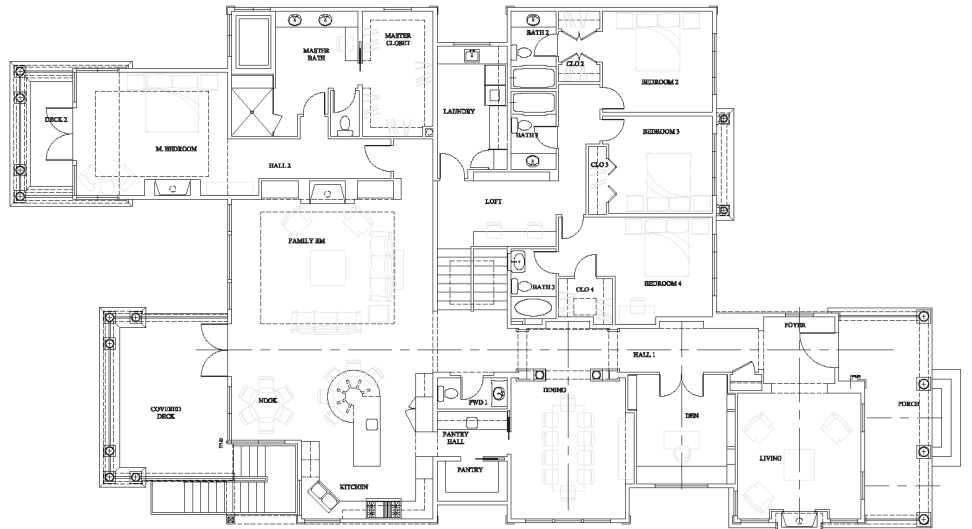

Views can be enjoyed from every level. The kitchen and dining room also have views, as well as the master suite, which has a private deck and fireplace.

On the main level of The Revival are a formal living/sitting room, comfortable family room, private den/library with custom cherry cabinetry and formal dining room.

The gourmet kitchen features a warming drawer, range-top pot filler, vegetable sink and three ovens. Slab granite on countertops and the oversized island and eating bar are complemented by crème brulee-colored cabinetry. A hidden full-house vacuum includes a kitchen dustpan.

For added convenience while entertaining, the home has a butler's pantry that leads from the kitchen, into the formal dining room and includes a metal hammered sink as well as storage for china.

The home's Greek Revival-inspired architecture, by Curtis Gelotte of Gelatte Hommas Architects, makes it one of the most distinctive homes in this neighborhood made up of homes designed by the Northwest's top residential architects.
